Prize Baby Contest For Oak Lawn

A Baby Contest will be held Jan. 12 at the Oak Lawn Welfare Station at the Oak Lawn Public School. Mayor Emery said that the Chamber of Commerce would give $10 for the prizes. Five dollars will be given to the first baby, then three dollars to the next and $2 as the third prize.

Dr. Earl Pronger of Blue Island and Miss O'Connor will be the judges. The doctor will mark off the defects and in the summary the baby having the least defects will receive the first prize and the next two will be judged the same way.

This Welfare Station has been sponsored by the Oak Lawn Community Club. Since this station has been opened in July over fifty babies have been taken care of. Given complete examination physically. Statistics show in the recent survey made by the Welfare Bureau that out of two hundred families in Oak Lawn there are 135 children of pre school age. Oak Lawn needs this welfare bureau and is very thankful to Cook County Health Department which furnishes and pays the doctors and nurses salaries.

Oak Lawn Has Movies Now

Oak Lawn has been very lucky of late in ways of entertainment. Every Friday evening at 8:15 p. m. Mr. George Rinck has a moving picture show at the Oak Lawn Public School. Mr. Rinck shows the very latest pictures. We have had some pictures here that have been running at the south side theatres at the same time. Often Mr. Rinck shows them here. Mr. George Strand plays the piano during the entire run of Pathe weekly, Big Picture and Comedy. On Friday evening of this week Rin Tin Tin in "The Lighthouse by the Sea" will be shown. Mr. Rinck has arranged his picture schedule so anyone coming from neighboring villages can come up on the seven o'clock train and can easily make the last or 10 o'clock train home. In going to Chicago to the theatre the average show takes two and a half hours and you have to ride the early train in order to make the last one home. The admission is only 25 cents for adults and 15 cents for children. Oak Lawn feels lucky in having this entertainment during the winter months.

Cooper & Hostert Plan Open House

The show room of Cooper and Hostert, Mokena Ford Dealers will be just about the most popular place in the city this week. Ford National Show Week which opened yesterday and will continue through next Saturday evening, has brought out the greatest exhibit in the history of the Ford Motor Company. Not only is a full line of improved cars being shown, but the trim lines of the various types are enhanced by such new appointments as brightly colored wire wheels, top boot and gypsy, curtains, windshield wings and windshield wiper produced by the Ford Motor Company. This special equipment, is being exhibited for the first time in Ford National Show Week and should prove mighty interesting even to those who are already driving improved Ford cars.

In addition to the cars and specialties, representative types of Ford Ton Trucks and Fordson tractors with both industrial and agri-

Girl Missing*MISSING

Lee Evans, Morgan Park bank clerk, who disappeared New Year's eve. A search is under way.

(TRIBUNE Photo.)

Lee Evans, aged 34 years, clerk in a Morgan Park bank and well known to many Mokena people, is reported to have mysteriously disappeared on New Year's eve. He worked in the bank late last Thursday evening and was to have met his wife at the home of her sister Mrs. Wm. Weber in Lockport the same evening. Bank officials fear he may have met with foul play. His employers speak highly of him and his books were in good shape when he quit work Thursday.

Mr. Evans married Sophia Suhl a former Mokena girl and was a frequent visitor in Mokena.

Newspapers and police have been asked to aid in the search for the missing man.

To Dedicate New
M. E. Parsonage

The new parsonage of the M. E. church at Frankfort is to be formally dedicated Saturday night of this week. A dedicatory banquet is to be held at the church parlors followed by a special dedicatory program. Dr. Lumsden of Dixon, the new district superintendent is to be the speaker of the evening. Rev. B. Duncan, pastor of the M. E. church of Frankfort will also take part in the program. The new parsonage is modern and a big credit to the growth and activities of the Frankfort church.

Liberia Colony Signs Torn Down

Considerable excitement was created the past week when large billboards were erected on the Scherer farm east of Frankfort on the Lincoln highway reading "Liberia A Colony for Colored People". These signs were not up very long for one night some one got busy and demolished the signs. Suit is to be started soon to quiet title on this property.

The colored colony promoters have no claim whatever on the farm it is understood.

cultural equipment will be displayed.

Arrangements for the week's display here were made by the Chicago branch of the Ford Motor Company to coincide with exhibits in every Dealer's showroom in the United States. The purpose of the display is to give the public of Mokena an opportunity to become better acquainted with the improved Ford car. Ford service so thoroughly covers the city that there is a showroom convenient to practically every home and the display will remain open in the evening to accommodate those whose day is occupied. In Ford cars which will be shown during the National Show week are incorporated improvements in body design and construction and chassis refinement more pronounced than any made in the history of the Model T chassis. Although thousands of these improved cars are in operation all over the country at the present time, there are still many persons who have not had opportunity to view the entire line and inspect in detail the improvements which have so greatly increased the popularity of Ford cars.

Get Rich Haul
Thornton Day
Light Robbery

Two bandits entered the Thornton State Bank Wednesday afternoon, staged the customary holdup and escaped with a loot of $5000. Cashier W. C. Bielfeldt, Miss Harriett Henricus, assistant cashier and three customers were lined up against a wall and then tied up with ropes. Before departing the bandits took a watch and chain from one of the bank patrons. The men escaped in an auto they had left with a third confederate a considerable distance from the bank.

About $5000 was taken. The County Highway police were at once notified and patrolled the highway but found no trace of the robber car. The highway police came as far as Tinley Park in their search. Thornton is 11 miles south east of Tinley Park and is near to Homewood.

This is one of the largest hauls made in recent bank robberies in this section.

Robbing banks is evidently a very lucrative profession and there is no fear of the law shown. No bank is safe from the sudden visits of the modern followers of their famous ancestor, Robin Hood.

by Rev. Otto C. Frey

(With this issue we are printing the last installment of Rev. Otto C. Frey's interesting and instructive article on "Higher Education." Rev. Frey is the pastor of Green Garden Methodist church. We hope to be able to publish more of Rev. Mr. Frey's instructive articles in the future.—Editor.)

Let a person go through college, beginning the "real thing" at the beginning of his course, solve all the problems that he there meets, outside of, as well as within his text book, and ten to one he is better fitted than he otherwise would be, for the solving and mastering of the problems of life. A college course is a good balance wheel for life's intricate and delicate mechanism. Here is a man brilliant without it, he would be more brilliant with it. A collegecourse broadens, solidifies, gives experience, enlarges one's view, makes one master of himself and of the situation that confronts him. Again it is a question whether you want to be one among ten thousand, or one among a hundred, a teacher whose field is the world, (continued on page 4)

Dairymen Given Ultimatum In Cow Test Fight

The Bowman Dairy Company has given the dairy men supplying the local plant of the company ten days in which to decide if they will sign up to have their cattle tested for tuberculosis.

Under orders from city health authorities in Chicago, the Bowman company has announced that after April 1 all milk sent to its plant must come from dairy herds free from tuberculosis.

A written notice was sent out to some 180 dairymen supplying milk to the Mokena plant of the Bowman Company stipulating that application to have herds tested must be made by January 15. After Jan. 31 the Bowman plant will refuse to purchase milk from farmers who have not submitted their herds for tests.

Of 180 farmers supplying milk to the Mokena plant, only eleven have specified willingness to bring their herds under state and federal supervision.

At present the Bowman plant is paying $2.75 a hundred pounds for milk received from tuberculin tested herds and $2.50 for milk from untested herds.

The dairymen of the Mokena district have called a special meeting for Saturday night of this week at Frankfort to further discuss the situation.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Slants on Life

A Superficial Conclusion

THE servants of the Melfords were trained to a silence more submissive than usual, though like other servants they let their tongues wag below stairs. Those of them that had to do with breakfasts especially might have passed with the dumb, for at breakfast Melford was irascible if speech happened to interrupt his analyses of the financial pages. Even Mrs. Melford, who made it a point to come down to breakfast with Melford, was usually a silent partner at that function. This morning, dressed with care, as always, she was so alluring that no man but Melford could have perused financial pages while he might have scanned her. She was ten years younger than her husband.

"Do you remember about the Dells?" she asked.

He was negotiating his coffee, and apparently dissatisfied with its heat. "The Dells? What about them?"

"You promised me you would go to the affair tonight."

"What affair?"

"Why, they entertain. And they have engaged several notable artists to assist."

"Dell has nothing else to do. I have. I'm too busy."

"But you promised me. And you never go out with me nowadays."

"I give you full liberty to amuse yourself, don't I? And plenty of money and all that. I have two or three deals on that take all my time. I'm about the first man downtown in the morning, and you find me at work in the library when you come in at night. I don't even go to my clubs."

"But isn't it your place to go with me once in a while—at least for appearance' sake, even if you find no pleasure in my company?"

"Nonsense! I'm known as a busy man. One of these days, when I've carried through the plans I'm working out, I'll try to be what they call 'a model husband.' Then I'll go with you as much as you like."

"Would you, really? I fear the habits you are forming will never be broken."

"But you're having a good time, anyway. You go to this and that constantly. You have a box at the opera, the theaters are open to you, with dances and what not to fill in during the season. And you play tennis and golf and go about in the summer."

"Yes. I have to do these things for mental relief—and to forget. I lack your company."

"Yet you must meet persons—as other women do—who are natural cavaliers—men who have nothing else to do. I like you to enjoy yourself!"—he looked up to see a strange expression on her face—"and you must permit me to go my way."

"But people talk when they see me about so much without you."

"People talk about everything that doesn't concern them. Where's young Bloomer? You used to have him to dinner quite often, and he used to squire you about. Why can't he still?"

Mrs. Melford turned white and rose. "I haven't seen him for weeks," she ventured.

"Well, look him up, and please let me attend to my business." And Melford, who had wasted valuable time, hurried out to his motor and was away.

A month afterward Melford entered a Wall street buffet early one afternoon in an abstracted state. He recognized no one. Two brokers who saw him pass in the entry abandoned the subject they had been discussing.

"There goes a man hard hit," said one. "You've noted that his pet stock Orient Mining, slumped this morning?"

"Almost to zero," said the other. "Have you been caught in any of his misadventures?"

"No. I had a bunch, I guess. No other reason."

"He's surely losing his grip. That's what a woman can do even when she's out of the market."

"Yes. Women are to blame for a lot, even when they seem to be bystanders. Isn't it strange Melford didn't see his wife's game before it was too late?"

"What do you mean?"

"Why, she traveled with that young sport, Bloomer, a long time, afterward pretending, so the women say, that she had broken with him for cause. Pulled the wool over Melford's eyes."

"And then eloped with the fellow! Can you beat it?"

THE SHOPS

In the town of Reven-Saw there was one principal street in which were the shops. It was in this street that the Fair was held. Great banners, which had been painted by Parent Roger Cole, hung between the buildings. Torchlights were put up and colored electric lights were strung gracefully up and down and across the street. Every shop had flags flying from it, while, of course, every shop was brilliantly lighted.

They Carried a Pall.

led by Parent Stuart Williams, all through the evening.

Some of the little Mothers and Daddies wore wreaths of flowers around their heads and crowns made of silver and gold paper over cardboard. Some wore costumes to represent Mother Goose characters. There was Little Boy Blue. Daddy Harry Bishop was Little Boy Blue. Mother Helen Sidney was Bo Peep. Daddy Jimmie Bolton was Cock Robin and Mother Lulu Johnson was the Old Woman Who Lived in the Shoe, with a number of other Mothers and Daddies following her. Daddy Fernwick was Jack and Mother Fernwick Jill, and they carried a pall, which, alas, was not filled with water.

There was also a float upon which was an exhibition of the work done by the Mother and Daddy children during the past week in the drawing class.

It was remarkable the talent some of these drawings showed, and though in some cases it was hard to know just what they represented, they were, without a doubt, very clever.

There were several pieces of embroidery done by the mothers. Had there been more time they would have had more stitches taken out and would have put in better ones, but considering everything, which is always the proper thing to do at a fair, they were excellent.

Policeman Sammy Grant kept order beautifully, while Parent Charles, as became a special policeman, got very hurried and excited whenever the crowd moved his way.

Everyone wandered in and out of the shops after watching the parade and listening to the music for awhile.

The most wonderful shop of all was the notion shop. That was managed by all the children who belonged to such big families that they really didn't have enough to do toward looking after the Daddies and Mothers and were not even needed in helping to do their fathers' work.

The notion shop was in a large building which had been vacant for some time.

In one section was the department of handkerchiefs and a big sign in front said:

"This way to the mean handkerchief department. Come, relatives and friends, and buy your handkerchiefs for the children here. Don't buy toys. The children will only break them. If they do not care for handkerchiefs, at least you will be giving something small and useful. We do not please children. Also, with every handkerchief bought goes our printed card. 'We wish it were more.' Come to us. We will fill your demand."

In another corner was the Absurdity bazaar. Its chief attraction was an enormous plume or feather behind which stood one of the new parents so that people passing by almost fell over while the parent said, "You could have knocked them down with a feather. I almost did."

Then there was the Wonder packages which were handed out to those who had little mothers and daddies who kept beginning sentences with "I wonder."

In these packages were the finished sentences to many wonders so that no one would ever have to wonder just what it was he was wondering. There were sentences such as "I wonder if it is going to rain and spoil our picnic."

"I wonder if I will pass my examinations."

"I wonder if I will be kept in school."

Oh, there were many of them.

On another counter were dolls made of hammered brass and over them a sign read:

"We do not make a sound and if you keep us shining you will find us as good as gold."

Then there were little automatic kickers. These were to give gentle little kicks under the table to Daddy and Mother children who might say the wrong thing when company came to meals. These little kickers were guaranteed to kick only the right child and would be both painless and effective. The shops were really unusual.

Go through district or even high school, take your special course in electricity, you get a position, as of course you can, as electrical engineer in some corner of the globe, and in all probability you can hold it forever—the LIGHT man of the town. But there are ten thousand of them in America alone. Who is it that edits and contributes to and is an authority upon electrical engineering? He is the man who has ideas and having them knows how to express them—he usually is a college graduate.

In all that has been thus far said we have taken for granted, that a person through high school or even district school, is capable of sensibly deciding as to his vocation in life. To say the least this is rather presumptuous. For the most part a person at such a period has circled only in a small sphere, his views are narrow and circumscribed, he breathes a local atmosphere, he has never measured his strength, he has not the capacity as yet for deciding his sphere of action in life's great battle, he needs to study, to read, to think—all these he can best do during his college course. Better grind your axe before you go to the forest to fall the oak. It saves time and energy.

But let us take a step higher, and from our advanced ground let our vision sweep the horizon. What we have been talking about concerns more the mere making of a living. Is there not something more ideal, yea real, in life? Is not life itself the problem: a problem that on every hand confronts us with its doubts, its tears, its hopes, its fears, its misgivings, its opportunities, its inspirations, its glories? And this is life. How inspiring, how divine, if only we are prepared for it. Young men, young women prepare: "To thine own self be true." Develop the latent powers and possibilities of your natures. They are God-given. Lay claim to the inheritance that is rightly yours. Be master and in your mastership mount to the loftiest heights for which nature has endowed you. You are divinely called to conquer and command, to reign a goodly king, to hold sway over minds and empires, if only you will prepare and take the oath of allegiance to that higher manhood and womanhood that is willing to serve, to sacrifice and to save.

Leadership is the need of the world to day, but only such leaders as are devoid of selfishness and devoted to a high and holy purpose need apply. Shams are shameful! Educated selfishness and sinfulness are the curse of the age. Such leadership must be supplanted by leaders who are trained, and tried and true, devoid of all guile, devoted to a high purpose, that is fixed and eternal. Such leaders can come only from such schools as teach by example as well as by precept these higher ideas and nobler ideals in their purest and broadest sense. Mere secular education leads to selfishness, refined though this may be. Sectarian schools give birth to narrowness, prejudice and bigotry. An institution that is broad and truly Christian in its teaching affords the best opportunity for the development of that ideal manhood and womanhood that the world so much needs. Such institutions have been and are the conservators of patriotism, the hope of the nation. These are our forts and our fortresses, our military academies and camping grounds.

Young men and women PREPARE—prepare for living, prepare for life, prepare for battle; for already we can see the hosts advancing—the marching of the millions; they are looking for a leader, noble, strong and brave. PREPARE, and then go forth to conquer or to die, and at the close of day, you shall ride a flaming chariot of fire in the king's highway—a victorious conqueror.

CARE OF CONVALESCENT IN SUMMER

For those who are just recovering from a serious illness the problem of food is a serious one. The patient, though well on the road to recovery, is usually weakened by the rigors of disease and the excessive heat is wont to sap his energy. Hence, the foods that are consumed during this period should be considered carefully as to digestibility, food value, ease of assimilation, purity and sterility. These are important in any food but especially so when the consumer is not strong and healthy.

In most cases, the one who is convalescing consumes milk in large quantities. This food contains all of the elements that are essential to the body. If milk is pure and germless, it is easily digested and assimilated.

Where the milk supply is uncertain or the quality not of the best, evaporated milk should be employed. It is sterile; it is just pure milk with about sixty per cent of the water removed. Its double richness may be modified, if desired, by the addition of water or it may be used just as it is, where rich, creamy dishes are desired.

Many people make the mistake of confusing evaporated milk with condensed milk. They are not at all similar in appearance, composition or taste. They cannot be used for the same purposes; condensed milk is a combination of sugar and milk; evaporated milk has no added sugar, being pure milk of double-rich quality and food value.

Following are recipes of easily prepared dishes and foods that are well suited for the invalid and the convalescent.

Loganberry Cream.

½ cup evaporated milk ½ cup loganberry juice
¼ cup water 2 tbsp. lemon juice
Pinch salt

Put all ingredients in a Mason fruit jar and shake thoroughly. Chill and serve in glasses filled ¾ full of ice chips. Raspberry, blackberry, and cherry juice may be used instead of the loganberry.

Iced Cocoa.

3 tsp. cocoa milk diluted
3 tsp. sugar with
¼ cup water ½ cup water
Pinch salt ½ tsp. vanilla
½ cup evaporated

Mix cocoa and sugar thoroughly and add the ¼ cup water and boil over a low flame for 15 minutes. Scald the diluted milk and add cocoa syrup and salt. Continue cooking for 15 minutes in double boiler. Add vanilla. Chill and serve with whipped cream. Top with

BORN TAILORS GUILD

How to Select a Suit

A N UNWRITTEN law still holds in England that a man having once made his choice of a tailor, never changes. He often inherits this choice from his father and grandfather, and it is not unusual for the same tailoring firm to serve a family for several generations.

This hard and fast rule would not suit Americans, but in principle it has its advantages. The wise man selects a tailor he knows to be reputable and competent and always goes to him. In this way, the tailor comes to know his likes, dislikes, and individual requirements for fitting. He decides in advance what general type of suit he wishes and about how much he can pay, and then spends plenty of time in choosing the style and material.

A man must understand his own strong points and shortcomings and never allow himself to be carried away by a style that is not meant for his particular type. The man who would look slighter must avoid tight-fitting clothes. The bottom of his coat fronts must be square cut and not rounded, to give an effect of height. The thin man will appear less lean looking if the lines of his suits are not too severely cut.

Quality can be fairly well gauged by the price and the word of the tailor. In novelty cloths, it is that feature for which one pays and not necessarily for quality, but in plain materials, price is a reliable guide. No reputable tailor nowadays hesitates to admit that a cloth is only part wool. However, "all wool" does not necessarily mean "pure wool." Woolen goods known as shoddy is made from used cloth re woven and does not have the wearing qualities of unused or virgin wool.

The pattern and color of the cloth should be selected on the same general principles as the style. Extremes are to be avoided for long wearing.

Just around the Corner

EVEN big-city folks must have their "neighborhood stores"! Most of them would no more think of going down town to fight their way through the crowds in search of a roast for dinner than they would of walking to the factory to get a pair of shoes.

City women know that their neighborhood stores can supply them just what they want — and that, in most cases, the service is more alert and friendly.

The same thing is true of this "neighborhood". Our merchants—the men whose ads you read in this paper — are in position to furnish your home with the best and most popular brands of goods. Not only can they save you money, but they gladly relieve you of a lot of worry and loss of time.

TAILORS' GUILD ORGANIZED TO UPLIFT THE PROFESSION

ORGANIZATION of the Born Tailors' Guild, an association of master tailors, with headquarters in Chicago, was announced today by W. A. Churchill, executive secretary of the new league. The slogan of the Guild is "Tailors are born, not made," and its two-fold object is to lift the tailoring trade to a higher plane of perfection in the art of making clothes for men, and establish in the minds of men and boys a definite appreciation of style, fabric and tailoring in men's clothes, just as the Parisian designers have made every woman a connoisseur of feminine fashions. Wage scales, labor controversies and price fixing will have no place in the work of Born Tailors' Guild, according to Mr. Churchill.

W. A. Churchill.

"Our purpose in organizing this Guild," said Mr. Churchill, "is to bind together the master tailors of America, united in an effort of raising the standards of our trade. There is real artistry in the making of clothes and our idea is to place our trade in the class of art. Our objective is for the making of better clothes for men, the perfection of our trade to the very highest point possible."

Back to craft organization of early English times, Mr. Churchill and his associates went to get a model for their association. In those times each craft had its own guild and received a charter from the king. Occasionally the kings were members of them. Guild members were bound by oath of brotherhood to uphold the standards of the profession and to pass down from generation to generation the treasured secrets of that craft. Before a man could become a master tailor he had to serve seven years as an apprentice, then as a journeyman for two years, during which time he was taught all the skill and secrets of the trade. After preparing an exceptionally fine piece of work, his masterpiece, which he submitted to the Guild Assembly, the journeyman became a master and was admitted to the Guild. The spirit of this ancient type of craft association has been made the background of the Born Tailors' Guild, according to Mr. Churchill.

"We seek to bring back into the tailoring craft some of the old-time romance and idealism of Tooley Street," he said. "We want our master tailors to reassert their pride in perfection of workmanship and to study men's dress as a profession. Such an idea should mean better-dressed men and more economy throughout the industry."

The first president of the Guild is Edgar R. Born, of the tailoring house of M. Born & Co., established fifty years ago. It was named in his honor.

Edgar R. Born.

THE FEDERAL RESERVE
A NATIONAL PROBLEM

By WILLIAM E. KNOX
President, American Bankers Association

The Federal Reserve situation is the paramount problem before American banking today. The time is approaching when it will be necessary for the nation to consider the question of rechartering the Federal Reserve Banks.

The Federal Reserve System must be preserved. It is one of the most scientific banking systems in the world. During the last ten years, through all the stress of war, inflation, depression and revival, it served this country as no country was ever served by a banking system. We know that without it our nation would have had a financial disaster far more devastating than any that ever assailed it.

While we have this great loyalty and obligation to the System, we must recognize that among its friends there has risen serious controversy over many matters of detail. There are many demands for change in the methods of its management and in details of its operation. Where these demands represent broadly the greatest good of the greatest number we should support them. Where they represent merely narrow, diverse interests of one part of the country or one type of business or finance, they should be subordinated to the common good. We should meet on the great broad ground of the common welfare—first to preserve the system in general as it is now constructed, and secondly to bring about, carefully and soundly, such changes as are required to adjust it to circumstances of today.

The task of considering, sifting, weighing and co-ordinating discussion and suggestions regarding the Federal Reserve System has been confided to the Economic Policy Commission of the American Bankers Association. It is hoped that thereby the Federal Reserve System will be given the best thought and the best support of banking. There is no greater service banking can render the nation than this. It goes right to the heart of good management of the public economy of America.

Automobile Law
Violation Hit

Effective Force Under Secretary of State Emerson Makes Many Arrests.

A small force of automobile investigators working under the direction of Secretary of State Louis L. Emerson does much towards safety on the public highways.

The force does not exceed 30 men, and it covers the entire state, but its effectiveness is not measured by its numbers.

During the first six months of this year the investigators checked 12,000 violators and made approximately 1,000 arrests. During the same time, more than 200 stolen automobiles were found and restored to their owners.

At Mattoon early in the year a band of automobile thieves was run down and 49 cars were recovered. Due to this same investigation 50 stolen cars were recovered in the vicinity of Benton. The thieves were caught and the band broken up.

The small force of investigators is distributed throughout the state, counties being assigned to individual investigators. It is, of course, impossible for the investigator to be on hand always in every part of the large territory assigned to him. He gets results by co-operation with the police and sheriffs' forces.

At least a quarter of a million dollars which would otherwise never be paid into the state treasury is collected in fees as the result of the activity of these men.

AUTO FEES ENOUGH TO PAY BOND ISSUE

Over $62,000,000 Collected by Secretary of State Since January, 1917.

During the administration of Secretary of State Louis L. Emerson a total of over $62,000,000 has been collected in fees by the automobile department, according to the figures given out today.

The exact amount collected from January, 1917, to October 1 this year, is $62,005,864.

When the financing of the first hard road system was being discussed in 1917 considerable doubt was expressed as to whether the automobile fees would be sufficient to pay off the $60,000,000 bond issue.

Leaving out the matter of interest, enough has already been collected in the first eight years of the 20-year period to pay off the principal.

In 1917 only $1,587,772 was collected by the automobile department. During the first nine months of this year $12,774,981 was collected by the automobile department and the total for the year will run well over $13,200,000.

The figures given out by Secretary Emerson show how fees have climbed during the eight years. The total for the various years is as follows:

1917	$1,587,772.69
1918	2,762,567.53
1919	3,202,176.57
1920	5,893,596.02
1921	6,776,781.17
1922	7,861,211.21
1923	9,630,367.77
1924	11,513,957.05
1925 to October 1	12,774,981.00

In the meantime the number of automobile licenses in the year has increased from 340,292 in 1917 to over 1,082,148 issued up to October 1 this year.

Newspapers Help Safety Campaign. Newspapers are given credit by Secretary of State Louis L. Emerson for aiding in decreasing the number of automobile accidents.

Statistics show that the number of accidents per automobile operated is decreasing, Mr. Emerson says, and in many cities there has been an actual decrease in the total number of automobile accidents.

"This is due in a large measure," he adds, "to the publicity given by newspapers to causes of accidents. The newspaper is the most effective single force in the interest of greater safety."

The Old Time Dance

Will the old fashioned dances ever come back?

This question which is echoed from every part of the country ever since Henry Ford started to popularize the music and dances of the yesterday, finds an answer in the Detroit News in the review of an old fashioned dance held as an experiment in a Detroit dance hall frequented by the so-called younger set.

Officials of the dance hall had staged the dance for the express benefit of those of another generation who had been literally crowded from the dance floor by modern jazz music. But, they scarcely anticipated "five thousand men and women howling for the right to dance", the waltz, schottische, polka and form dances. And, included in those who participated in this demonstration were all ages from sixteen to sixty.

It faced an audience that literally jammed the vast hall, jammed until police were called and the big front doors locked in the faces of hundreds who tried in vain to jam into the seething crowds. Henry Ford was not there, but a party of Ford executives and their friends were. It was a different crowd from that which usually appears at the public dance halls, although the sheik and his sheba were not missing. Hundreds of old men and women and middle aged couples crowded the floor from the first note and stayed until the last.

The spirit of the quadrille, that began in a lowly way must have blinked its eyes in wonderment, says the Detroit News. It was born to the swish of the hoop skirts and the times when the society reporter gravely reported "the brave and fair were in attendance". It was born in an era of kerosene lamps, tin types and fiddlers. Recently it faced high powered flood lights, moving pictures and a super-orchestra aided and abetted by Henry Ford's four-piece old fashioned orchestra.

There were several kinds of songs sung by the troubadours—the canzonet, or love song; serenade, or evening song; aubade, or morning song; servante in praise of patrons, roundelay, or song with refrain or chorus; dance song accompanying the round dance, and the pastourelle, treating of Arcadian love.

The Telephone's Inheritance

IN its material equipment the telephone was born poor. The art of telephony inherited little from older branches of the art of communications that could help its technical progress toward its destiny of usefulness. There was a spiritual heritage, however, for the telephone worker was heir to the tradition that had grown with the years among those who undertook to transmit or transport the words of men.

The message must go through! Greek runner, Roman courier, King's messenger, and Pony Express rider, sped to their distant goals self-urged by a consciousness that human need was being served. At the switchboard or telegraph key, in the mail car or airplane, the manifestation of this urge is ever present.

Telephone service by its very nature inherits this Spirit of Communication. For the men and women who comprise the organization that is to-day responsible for the delivery of 50,000,000 messages a day, it is the endowment with which their service began.

How Butter Fat in Milk Is Broken Up

Do you know what the word homogenization means?

Ninety-eight out of 100 housewives to whom the question recently was put admitted they couldn't answer. Can you?

But here it is explained by Miss Meta H. Given, food authority doing research work at the University of Chicago.

"Homogenization," says Miss Given, "is the name of the process which breaks up butter fat in evaporated milk into tiny particles so they blend evenly with the solids. Homogenization causes the butter fat globules to adhere to the albumin and the casein of the milk. In the process, milk is forced through countless numbers of openings at a pressure of around 3,500 pounds.

"In addition to preventing a cream and skim milk line, this breaking up of fat contributes to smoothness and perfect blending of foods such as cream sauces, soups, ice cream and in baked products.

"It also has a digestive advantage for those who have difficulty in assimilating milk. Many pediatricians recommend evaporated milk as a baby food, although, like other substitutes for the natural supply, it should not be considered as a food complete in itself. Addition of orange or tomato juice, barley water or lime water are important in providing adequate diet for the infant.

"All authorities recognize that normal mother's milk is the best food for infants, but this natural milk is frequently inadequate in quality and quantity. Scientists say cow's milk is the best substitute. But cow's milk must be modified and supplemented with other foods. The fat in mother's milk is in homogeneous suspension and being flocculent forms small curds in the stomach, but the fat in cow's milk is in relatively large globules, forms large tough curds in the stomach and is much harder to digest. In evaporated milk the fat is broken up by homogenization and the curds softened until in size and digestibility they resemble natural infant food."

Khedive's Ex-Chef Gives Cooking Tip

Great chefs are born, not made. Rarely if ever do they rise to the heights in their profession by dint of perseverance.

In Europe and the East a chef with the true gastronomic instinct is treasured jealously. He expects and obtains the treatment of an ambassador. His dishes are the pride of his master, to be boasted of to friends in the cafes and bazaars.

Such a chef is Haroutoun Gedojian, sometime chef to the family royal of the khedive of Egypt, now the owner of a bizarre gold coast restaurant in Chicago. In his forty-three years as a chef extraordinaire, Haroutoun's word has been law in the cuisines of three Egyptian princes and one princess, the mother of the khedive. When Lord Kitchener was sirdar of Egypt, before the trouble in the Soudan, Haroutoun cooked for him.

One of Kitchener's favorite dishes, according to Haroutoun, was schisch-kabb, a dish made from milk-fed baby lamb. Prince Jamel, another of his masters, was particularly fond of dried cream and honey, a preparation which is one of Haroutoun's zealously guarded secrets. Prince Saad Pasha was a keen admirer of a confection Haroutoun makes entirely out of flour, butter and nuts.

In many of his admirable dishes, Haroutoun uses evaporated milk, which is simply fresh cow's milk sterilized in cans and with sixty per cent of the water removed. Because of a homogenizing process through which evaporated milk is put, the fat globules in the milk are broken up into microscopic particles and distributed throughout the milk, where they remain in homogeneous suspension.

This breaking of the fat globules gives a distinct buttery flavor to every drop of the evaporated product, a flavor which ordinary market milk does not have. Haroutoun says he uses evaporated milk in preference to market milk in the preparation of all sorts of baked dishes, as well as in cooking.

SINNERS IN HEAVEN

IV

To Barbara, that evening seemed never-ending, her false position intolerable. She craved yet dreaded, the morning when she could talk with Hugh.

Once by themselves, the women's tongues buzzed over their coffee cups concerning the latest local scandal. Mrs. Rochdale proceeded with a glib account of a housemaid's treachery, possessing all the virtues, in whose room four empty whisky bottles had been found, during her absence on holiday! As she had been a frequenter of temperance meetings and had taken the pledge, this was in itself a terrible sin, even though she had never been seen drunk. Whether to allow her to return, or to write and denounce her forthwith, exercised her mistress' simple mind to the exclusion of sleep. After much discussion, it was decided to ask the vicar.

The girl shrank into her chair, sick at heart, old talks with Alan in her mind. What key, she wondered, did these people use in substitution for the true one given to the world and lost again? "Charity suffereth long and is kind," they read glibly; or "He that is without sin among you, let him cast the first stone." What did half the righteous souls, judging everybody in their own smug conception of Christianity, know of temptation, sin, the meaning of the word love with all its manifold sub-keys: consideration, understanding, sympathy.

"My dear," broke in old Mr. Rochdale's voice, as he seated himself beside her, "we must bring back the roses into your cheeks!" He took her hand and patted it. "You mustn't brood over the past. It was a terrible experience—terrible! But it's all over now. Forget it, Barbara, like a bad dream, and cheer up again."

The words were, to the girl, like blades of steel thrust into some bleeding wound. "Over. . . . Forget!" They seemed to reverberate in her mind, and her very soul turned sick and faint as, gripping the arms of her chair, she heard her mother's voice:

"Her time will soon be full again until her wedding, with all her old duties—"

Then Hugh came up and chatted, in his usual cheery way, and somebody played and sang. . . . But all the time those two words beat upon her brain. God! was it true? Was this not once more to capture her? Was this nightmare to become the reality, and the splendid real—all the very essence of life—to fade into the dream?

The morning was cold and bright. After a pretense at breakfast, she put on her coat, Hugh not being expected before lunch, and her mother not yet down.

A craving for freedom from stone walls, for vigorous action, had seized her. The cold air stinging her face, the wind buffeting her skirts, dulled momentarily the agony within. The lake glistened in the sunshine; here and there sprigs of ling still showed purple amid the russet of dead heather and bracken upon the common; the white sandy paths were crisp with frost.

At the corner where the lane joined the main road, she paused. Here, she and that other had first met. With exquisite pain, memories of those far-off first encounters seethed into her mind. She saw again the half-mocking smile upon his lips; remembered his teasing words and her own annoyance, after speaking of her heart's desire. . . . She understood, as she turned hurriedly away, how, from the first, those keen eyes had read into her heart, penetrating to what she was but vaguely conscious of herself.

Her heart's desire? Ah, how changed it all was now—how changed. Since treading last these familiar, heathery paths, a lifetime seemed to have elapsed. She looked back with wonder upon the inexperienced girl dimly yearning after an intangible something beyond the daily horizon.

Presently she turned her steps to the house where so many happy hours had been spent. The garden looked deserted now, the tennis court frost-bound and dreary. But the housekeeper welcomed her warmly; and the few school teachers installed there for Christmas holidays looked at her with ill-concealed curiosity. She hurried away, up to Mrs. Field's little den. Its owner being one of those whose arrivals ever had the charm of unexpectedness, the room had a cheerful fire and was fragrant with hothouse flowers. As Barbara looked round at the buff walls and deep-blue velvet curtains, the soft chairs built for comfort, and shelves stacked with books, other memories of confidential chats and cozy teas caused her again to realize the gulf yawning between herself and the girl of long ago.

She turned to the book shelves, then walked restlessly back to the fire. . . . All at once she caught, with a little cry, at the back of a chair, as her glance fell upon the writing table.

For the eyes she loved and had lost met her own, with the old straight penetrating look. . . . She ran forward and picked up the photograph. He wore the uniform of an air force officer, and his face was set in the lines of dogged stubbornness when unpleasant business was afoot, which she knew well. . . . The vivid likeness was bitter-sweet.

"It's a d-d nuisance—get it done!" She could almost hear the thought she read behind the grim lips. . . . Then, as she gazed upon the familiar features, all the past rose up and enveloped her; the comfortable English room faded. . . . Once more, in a far-away hut, she prepared strange food for her mate, ever and anon running to look for his return, seeing little black figures at play on the sand. . . . And presently he came striding down the sunny slope, fresh from a dip in the river, laden with fruit, his dear eyes searching for her. . . . She hurried to meet him, taking some of his burden. . . . Again she felt the warm touch of his lips, heard the laughter in his voice as he made some teasing remark.

The ringing of a bell brought her sharply back to reality, the sudden cruel contrast cutting her like a whip. With a low moan she sank upon a couch, throwing herself face downward among the cushions, her lips pressed to the unresponsive portrait. Despair again clutched her in its remorseless claws. . . . She lay inert in her blind fearless abandonment, oblivious to all things. . . .

The opening door and quick footsteps crossing the room did not disturb her. At the touch of an arm about her shoulders she started violently and raised a drawn face. Hugh stood beside her, consternation in his eyes.

"Bab!" he exclaimed, shocked by her expression. "My dearest! what ever is the matter?"

She sat slowly upright, the portrait still clasped with both arms, regarding him dumbly.

"I managed to get away this morning—Martha said you were here—" he stammered. "What is it, Bab? I-I thought something was wrong—"

It occurred to her that anybody less stupidly dense and unimaginative would have guessed the truth long ago. Then, swiftly chasing the thought, came the knowledge that it was his genuine simple trust in her and all his fellow-creatures which blinded him. Suspicion was as foreign to his honest nature as subtle changes were beyond his ken. She recognized, with a warm rush of sympathy, that her affection for this old companion remained unchanged; she alone was to blame for mistaking it for anything more, with the inevitable suffering she was about to cause. She stretched out her hand; and he took it in both of his.

Then Hugh Came Up and Chatted.

"Hughie! Everything is—wrong."

"Tell me all about it," he urged, sitting beside her. "We can probably put things right between us."

She shook her head, with a catch of her breath; then drew her hand gently free again.

"I'm—I've got to hurt you—horribly. Oh! my dear! I can't bear doing it." Rising impulsively, she walked to the window and back, her face working with emotion. "Can't you—guess, Hugh? Can't you realize that—that—everything is different, now?" she cried, looking straight into his bewildered face.

Apprehension was spreading over his features. His brown eyes, with their dawning sense of trouble, resembled that of a faithful dog not understanding the meaning of some unexpected chastisement. The girl could not bear to see it. She looked involuntarily down at what was still clasped to her breast. His glance followed hers, and the apprehension deepened.

"Guess—what?" he muttered. "What's that, Bab? A photograph?"

She nodded. He suddenly stepped toward her. "Whose? What—I—oh, lord! Tell me straight!"

It was the cry of one upon the borderland of tragic discovery. Feeling like an old-time executioner who let the ax fall upon the quivering neck of his victim, ending the hopes and affections of a lifetime, she silently handed him the photograph, and again turned to the window.

Looking with unseeing eyes at the frosty landscape, her thoughts reverted to a curiously similar scene in the past, wherein the situation was reversed. Hugh's portrait had played its part in that little drama. Alan, she remembered, had, with characteristic vehemence, torn it into shreds. . . .

then claimed her for his own, by the only bonds which constitute real possession of a woman. There may be other lawful ties, honorably recognized and adhered to; but, whether near in physical presence, or sundered by countless miles of sea and land, even by death itself, only the man to whom a woman's heart belongs holds her in true possession. None other can turn the key which unlocks the real fountains of her soul.

Hugh did not tear the cardboard to fragments. After a few moments' pregnant silence, he laid it upon a table and followed the girl to the window. His face was pale, and his voice toneless. "You mean, Bab—that—"

"I—I can never marry you."

He caught at a chair, but said nothing. "I—care for you—as much as ever," she went on hurriedly, seeing the look on his face. "But—it was never love! I have learned that, Hugh. I know now—"

"You mean—" he asked again huskily, as her voice faltered. "Croft?"

She nodded. The color ebbed still more from his cheeks, and he laid a hand on her arm. "But—my poor Bab! he is—dead—"

"Oh, I know! I know!" She clasped her hands in anguish. "But—you shall hear all the truth, Hugh—it is your duty. He—I—he was my husband."

Hugh started violently and dropped his hands. She stood motionless before him. For several long moments the ticking of a little clock and the crackling of the fire were the only audible sounds. In his slow fashion, the man was trying, gropingly, to adjust facts. "But—" he began at last. "I don't understand! You were only together a few weeks before the wreck. Where did you get—married? Why didn't somebody write? I don't understand," he repeated, bewildered. "I thought you disliked him."

She looked silently into his agitated face. It was evident that the truth was still far from his grasp.

"Hughie!" she said very quietly, "it was impossible to write. We were not married during the trip—not until we had been on the island for—over a year."

He gazed at her, speechless, his bewilderment gradually changing to dismay and dawning horror.

"On the island? For a year?" he echoed. "But—how on earth could you get married—" Suddenly the blood rushed to his temples and the horror grew and deepened. He caught her arm, gripping it fiercely. "You—my God! Barbara! you don't mean that you—you, of all people—and Croft—"

Abruptly he swung her arm free, his face blazing as she had never seen it. "The swine! the—rotten swine!" he choked, at a loss for words. "I trusted him. He gave me his word—"

"And he kept it," she cried quickly. He faced her, something nearer to a sneer than she had ever seen curling his good-natured lips. "In what way? By betraying the greatest trust one man can put in another? By dragging you down—"

"Be quiet, Hugh!"

The anger in her voice silenced him. He turned away, dazed. Sinking upon the couch, he covered his face with his hands.

The girl was trembling with indignation. Her back to the room, she struggled with the hot anger seething within until her woman's understanding won the victory. Then she turned round.

"It was my doing," she said.

"Your—doing?" He sprang to his feet and walked about agitatedly. "What do you mean? You were not the sort of girl to encourage—For God's sake, explain everything!"

"He kept his word to you," she repeated. "He saved my life at the risk of his own. In every possible way he looked after my safety and comfort: nobody could have done more. Although he—cared—all the time, I never even guessed it! He—he thought I—belonged to you." She paused, shading her eyes.

"Then—" "Months went by, and no rescue came. Then—I—oh, Hughie, I couldn't help it—I realized—I loved him, and—he—knew it, too. . . . We meant to wait—and tell you. But months passed again, and—the position became impossible. You can't understand here. But there we had to face facts—quite differently from ordinary standpoints—to make our own laws. He left the decision to me. . . . At last, after months again of struggle and—uncertainty—I became convinced that it would be right to make our own marriage, too—" She touched her finger. "This was the only ring he had."

Her words went into silence. A faint relief replaced the look of horror in Hugh's face. To an essentially clean-living British sportsman, the idea of wantonness between the girl he loved and the man he had trusted was unbearable. That hasty judgment was contradicted by her words. He could not, as she surmised, clearly comprehend the magnitude of the forces to be contended with upon the island, any more than a man learning swimming strokes in still water can realize the difficulties to be encountered, by the same movements, out in the open sea. But the simplicity of her explanation, offering no excuses, brought with it the force of truth. Evidently, however incomprehensible, each had acted in accordance with deeply weighed convictions.

This was Hugh's first plunge into such complications: he was utterly lost, adrift from every mooring.

Barbara, watching him, said held out her hand.

"You must not think hardly of Alan," she appealed wistfully. "If he had not behaved honorably, I should not have—loved him—as I did. Surely you believe that, Hugh?"

Mechanically he took her hand. "Oh, lord!" he ejaculated. "What a mess it all is!"

"It's hell for me!" she exclaimed, a bitter agony in her voice that startled him. He looked at her strangely, amazed. This tragic-eyed woman who had suffered so much; learning to love with such fierce intensity, was far removed from his old girlish companion. He felt in a turmoil: full of pity for her, though still half incredulous, chaotically uncertain of his feelings toward Croft. Dropping her hand, he picked up the photograph once more. Then the full realization of his own loss—to be faced for the second time—surged up in his heart, as he looked at the pictured face. He put it down hurriedly, and passed his hand across his forehead.

"This a—d—d world now for us both. Bab! I—I'd better go—it has rather bowled me over—" He turned away, stumbling a little. "It—will be such a blow to the old people," he muttered huskily.

The girl watched him, helplessly, with aching heart. As he reached the door, she caught the suspicious glint of misery in his eyes which seemed to break down all barriers. Her defensive attitude melted into sympathy, as he melts at the touch of hot coals. In her impulsive way she ran to him and seized the lapels of his tweed coat.

"Hughie!" she cried, tears raining unheeded down her cheeks. "Forgive me! I couldn't help it. It—it breaks my heart to hurt you like this."

His hands closed upon her arms, but he could not speak.

"I—couldn't bear to—betray your trust," she sobbed. "Believe me, Hughie, I tried not to—I tried to keep loyalty to you—"

"Oh!" he interrupted vehemently, "don't make it harder. Do you suppose I should have wanted you to marry me from—duty?—out of loyalty?" He paused, regarding her thoughtfully for a moment. "There's one thing, Bab—"

"Yes?" "When you tell—your mother or anybody—of—things—being over between us, don't mention your marriage! They won't understand, and it will be rough for you."

She threw back her head, with something of Alan's old arrogance, and drew away.

"I know you mean that kindly, Hugh; but it's impossible! It would seem as if I were ashamed. It would be implying that our convictions were wrong."

"People are not overcharitable about here, as you know," he urged. "You may both have acted according to your convictions, and they may have been right; but all the same it was—unorthodox, and— They will simply throw mud at you and—especially—him! Bab," he came back to her, speaking with unusual insistence, "I can't bear to think of you facing that! For my sake, as well as your own—and—his, don't tell them."

She remained silent. The truth of his words, as applied to Alan, struck her forcibly. The contemplation of his name suffering calumny had already, that morning, proved unbearable.

"It would be an awful trouble to your mother and my old people," he added, with his usual thoughtfulness. "They will be upset, as it is. And—they couldn't understand."

She suddenly turned and caught his shoulders.

"Hughie! do you?" she asked earnestly. "Ah! you must! I can't lose—your faith, too."

Then he acted in a manner that astonished them both. Passion and a sense of the dramatic had ever been far from his nature. Involuntarily, however, his fingers closed around her wrists. Raising her hands, he pressed his lips upon them.

"Heaven knows what was right or wrong," he declared hurriedly. "But—oh, my dear! God help you!"

The door slammed, and he was gone from her life—this man who had been friend and brother, playmate or lover, all her youth. . . . She stood gazing drearily through the window at the desolate tennis court, where they had played so often together, and an extra wave of lonely bitterness swept into her heart. . . . She saw Hugh, with bent head, cross the grass to the garden gate. . . . Then she sank into a chair before the fire, crushed by an overpowering sense of physical weakness.

"Chameleon Lakes"

It is well known that the water of many lakes exhibits characteristic colors. Lake Geneva, at the western end of Switzerland, is blue, while Lake Constance, at the eastern end of that country, is green. Blueness implies purity, since the natural color of water is blue. A green lake has its water slightly clouded with impurities.

It is said that green lakes sometimes become absolutely colorless for a time, and it has been found that this sudden change of hue is due to the washing into the lakes of mud colored red by oxide of iron. Red is complementary to green, and the result of the mixture is that the green color of the water becomes for the time being neutralized.

Wigs Long Worn

Wigs date back 100,000 years, if the curious carving of a prehistoric woman's head carved in ivory, found by M. Piette in a cave in the Landes, may be interpreted as a wig of the Stone Age.

The First Gospel Message

By REV. GEORGE E. GUILLE
Extension Department, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel.—Gen. 3:15.

Here is the first gospel message in history. Of all the golden tongued evangelists of all time, God is the first to tell of a Redeemer. And for the telling He waits not an hour after sin has, through Satan's lie, made moral wreck of the creatures of His hand. Moreover, it is told in one breath with the denunciation of judgment upon Satan, showing that judgment precedes salvation. God must judge sin at the cross before He can forgive the believing sinner. I must judge myself as a sinner before I can accept the grace that flows from Christ's finished work for my salvation.

The promised seed was to come through the chosen nation of Israel. God called Abram out of the idolatry of his day and made him the depository of promise. He was the progenitor of the Jewish race. The promise was later confined to the tribe of Judah; later still to the house of David of that tribe; and at length to a virgin member of that tribe residing in Bethlehem. Thus throughout Old Testament history "the woman" was represented by Israel, which nation was to produce, in humanity, the Lord Jesus Christ. Behold how the predicted enmity between Satan and the woman has manifested itself in all the ages! It appears in Satan's attempt to corrupt the race in Noah's day by the irruption of fallen angels among women, Noah alone remaining uncontaminated. It was a daring travesty on the virgin birth of the woman's seed. It appeared in the famine which Abram encountered as he entered the Land of Promise, and by which he was forced out of that land. It appeared in the Egyptian bondage and Pharaoh's attempt to destroy the race there. It appeared in the wars of the Canaanites and other nations against the Jews; in the wicked plot of Haman; in the evil designs of Antiochus Epiphanes and in a score of other incidents of Old Testament history. When the New Testament is opened, there it appears again; in the effort of Herod to destroy the males of Bethlehem; in the storm on the sea of Galilee; in the Lord's anguish in the garden of Gethsemane. Finally Satan succeeds in having the woman's seed nailed to the cross, and his triumph seems complete. But no! This was, in the councils of God, but a temporary injury to that promised seed: "Thou shalt bruise his heel." The heel is the most invulnerable part of the body. Satan has overreached himself. That death to which he has put the Lord Jesus is the divine remedy for the sin that his lie has brought into the world. There was sealed the doom of Satan: "It shall bruise thy head." The permanent injury is for him, not for the one against whom he has remained in perpetual enmity. "Now shall the prince of this world be judged," said Christ as He faced the cross. At that cross He acquired the power that shall eventually crush all Satan's designs and accomplishments and destroy him forever in the lake of fire.

God raised His Son from the dead and exalted Him in the highest heavens, but the enmity is not yet at an end. If "the seed of the woman" designated a person, then "the seed of Satan" is no less a person. And who can that person be but the Antichrist, the "man of sin," the "son of perdition," the "lawless one," whose coming is after the working of Satan? Yes, it is he who shall yet appear in the earth, after the church is gone, even he whose coming shall be "with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish, because they received not the love of the truth that they might be saved." But it is written, "whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of His mouth and shall destroy with the brightness of His coming."

Yea, the Word of God shall stand and no power can annul it. The triumph of the seed of the woman shall be complete and His truth vindicated throughout the universe.

God's Approach to Men

From Abraham to Jesus Christ God has approached mankind through righteous men extending pardon on the simple condition of repentance and obedience. From Jesus Christ to this day He has been doing the same thing, having made himself known in Christ, who fulfilled the ideal of the prophets, and making Himself known still through those who strive to reproduce the life of Jesus Christ on earth.—Albert E. Dunning.

God's House

The blessedness of God's house is that there men praise Him. This it was that made that house so precious to the Psalmist. And what Christian man can climb higher than this—to find in the praise of God the greatest joy of his life?—J. J. S. Perowne.

Sunday School Lesson

Lesson for January 10

FIVE MEN BELIEVE ON JESUS

LESSON TEXT—John 1:35-49.
GOLDEN TEXT—Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world.—John 1:29.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Five Men Follow Jesus.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Seeking and Finding Jesus.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Bringing Others to Christ.

Through the testimony of John the Baptist, his disciples were pointed to Jesus. This same testimony he gave the previous day.

I. Two of John's Disciples Followed Jesus (vv. 35-37).

As a result of the Baptist's testimony, two of his disciples left him and followed Jesus. One of these was Andrew (v. 40) and presumably the other was John. When the Baptist pointed out Jesus as the Lamb of God, the long-expected Messiah, these disciples sought further acquaintance with Jesus. In view of John's request, they looked upon the Lord. This look was sufficient to induce them to follow Jesus. When they looked they believed. The proof of their belief was their following after Him. John speaks, the disciples hear and follow. The whole plan of salvation is wrapped up in this simple testimony and action.

II. The Two Disciples Abiding With Jesus (vv. 38, 39).

1. Jesus' Question (v. 38). When Jesus saw the disciples following Him, He inquired, "What seek ye?"

2. The Disciples' Reply (v. 39). They answer His question by inquiring as to His dwelling-place. Their reply showed their desire to go apart privately where they could disclose their hearts to Him. Knowing their hearts, He invited them to His place of abode; therefore, for the remainder of that day, they held sweet intercourse with the Master.

III. The Disciples Bringing Others to Jesus (vv. 40-46).

The very genius of Christianity is self-propagation. The usual method is to begin with those nearest us, home folk and relatives and pass out to ever-widening circles. The disciples who were with Jesus in blessed fellowship, went at once to tell others of the priceless treasure they have found.

1. Andrew Brings Peter (vv. 40-42). This is a beautiful example of brotherly affection, expressing itself in bringing another to Christ. How can a true brother who has found Christ do aught but go and tell his brother? The best place to begin our testimony for Christ is among our kinsfolk (Luke 8:39). When Andrew had witnessed to Peter, he brought him to Jesus where he could speak with Him personally.

2. Philip Bringing Nathanael (vv. 43-46).

Christ found Philip the following day as He would go forth into Galilee. Philip followed Him in response to a personal invitation. As soon as Christ found him, Philip found Nathanael and witnessed to him concerning the messiahship of Jesus. He said unto him: "We have found Him, of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets did write, Jesus of Nazareth" (v. 45). Christ is the sum and substance of the Old Testament. Nathanael was somewhat skeptical, but he was honest. Philip had the wisdom not to argue with him, but brought him to Jesus. It is frequently unwise to rebuke the skeptical for their lack of faith. The better way is to invite them to put Christ to a test.

IV. Nathanael Seeing and Hearing Jesus, Testifies of His Divinity (vv. 47-49).

As soon as Nathanael heard and saw Jesus all his doubts rolled away. Jesus proved that He was the omnipotent One. We do not know what Nathanael was doing under the fig-tree. Perhaps he was praying for heavenly light and guidance, but Jesus saw him. He was evidently sincere. He who is willing to be led and to do shall surely come into the light (John 7:17). He who acts upon the light given shall see greater things (vv. 50, 51). Angels ascending and descending upon the Son of Man, with the open heavens, show that Jesus Christ is the means of communication between earth and heaven (Heb. 10:19, 20; Eph. 2:18; Gen. 28:12). This narrative concerning the experiences of the first disciples exhibits the following stages of Christian experience:

1. Hearing about Jesus (v. 36).
2. Looking upon Jesus (v. 36).
3. Following Jesus (v. 37).
4. Abiding with Jesus (v. 39).
5. Witnessing for Jesus (vv. 41-45).
6. Bringing others to Jesus.

Accomplishing Things

To think we are able, is almost to be so; to determine on attainment, is frequently attainment itself.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

(©, 1926, Western Newspaper Union.)

VALUE OF ANIMAL EXPERIMENTS

THE arguments for and against what is erroneously called "vivisection" have been repeated many times in newspapers and magazines. While most people agree that man has a right to use animals for his own good, there is a small group of people who object, on principle, to any use of animals for increasing our knowledge. These persons are generally sincere and kind hearted. They are not, as a rule, reasonable or consistent, since they wear leather shoes and woolen clothes, eat animal food and use animals for beasts of burden and labor. Nor have I ever heard of an antivivisectionist who objected to exterminating mosquitoes, bedbugs or flies.

Most of these enthusiasts entirely overlook the fact that, leaving human interests entirely out of account, animal experiments have been of great benefit to animals themselves. If they asked the animals they are trying to protect, they would get some valuable ideas.

When dumb animals are sick and suffering, asked Mr. Baynes, the well-known naturalist and animal lover, what are they to do? When horses have glanders, when cattle have tuberculosis, when sheep have anthrax, when hogs have cholera and dogs have rabies and distemper, what can they do about it? They cannot discuss their troubles with each other. The only possible way help can come is through men and women who have studied animal diseases.

The modern scientific methods for treating and preventing animal diseases began with Pasteur, whose experiments on anthrax led him to the discovery of a serum which is used today all over the world to protect sheep from this deadly disease. Similar serums, worked out through experiments on the animals themselves, have also been discovered for chicken cholera, hog cholera, and other animal disease.

This work has now largely been taken over by the United States Department of Agriculture. A recent report states that the loss to the farmers of the country through animal diseases amounted in 1915 to $212,850,000, and that in the last 30 years the total loss from this cause has been over six billions of dollars. Work of the bureau of animal industries has not only saved a large amount of money but has also prevented an immense amount of suffering among the animals themselves. For instance, the experiments made in developing hog cholera serum cost the lives of 17 hogs. Yet in one year it saved over a million hogs.

So if the animals themselves could express their views, they would be strongly in favor of any experiments by which greater knowledge of any of the diseases from which they suffer could be secured.

LIGHT AND LIFE

LIGHT is life. Not poetically or sentimentally, but practically and actually. Not only that, but it is probably matter as well.

At the meeting of the American Academy of Science held at Milwaukee recently, Prof. R. A. Millikan, the well known authority on electrons, announced that he had discovered and proven the existence of "cosmic rays" which come to this earth constantly from some outside source and which, as some of his scientific associates said, will probably solve the problem of the existence of matter.

Today, with X-rays, ultra-violet light, wireless rays and all the other discoveries of the last thirty years, we are prepared for almost anything. Yet all this increased knowledge of light has come in a lifetime, crowded into a few years, after long ages during which the human race has groped in darkness.

Man is the only creature that has ever been able to overcome darkness. Every other living thing on earth is dependent on the sun or the moon for light. When these two natural sources of light fail, animals can only wait for the rising of the sun. Primitive man was in the same condition, until he learned to make fire and to use a dry branch for a torch to light up his cave. Then he learned to make a lamp out of the skull of some animal filled with fat and supplied with a rude wick. Later, the lamp was made of clay. More than one thousand years before Christ, Jewish priests made candles to burn before the altars. Probably other early races learned to make candles about the same time.

Gas from coal was first used in 1793. Petroleum, first called rock oil and later kerosene, was not discovered until nearly the middle of the last century. Electricity as a lighting medium was not developed until about 1880. So our present-day lighting methods have all developed in the last hundred years and electricity, the greatest of all, in less than fifty.

Each advance has increased the brilliancy and lowered the cost of lighting. Kerosene lamps are 50 per cent brighter than candles at the same cost. Gas is still brighter and cheaper. Today, the average American household uses 18 times as much light at less than 75 per cent of the cost, as compared to the candle burning days.

Is Winter Time Your Backache Time?

Does Your Back Foretell Every Change of the Weather? Do You Feel Old and Stiff and Suffer Sharp, Rheumatic Pains? Then Look to Your Kidneys!

DOES every cold, chill or attack of grip leave you lame, stiff and achy? Are you nervous and depressed; feel tired, worn out and miserable? Does your back throb and ache until it seems you just can't keep going? Then look to your kidneys! Colds and chills throw a heavy strain on the kidneys. They overload the blood with impurities that the kidneys have to filter off. The kidneys are apt to weaken under this rush of new work, become congested and inflamed.

It's little wonder, then, that every cold finds so many folks suffering with torturing backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness and annoying kidney irregularities.

If this is the case with you, don't risk neglect! Help your weakened kidneys with a stimulant diuretic. Begin using Doan's Pills. Doan's have helped thousands. Local users testify to their worth. Ask your neighbor!

"Use Doan's," Say These Good People:

CHAS. ROSEBOROUGH, 159 E. Monroe Ave., St. Charles, Ill., says: "I think a cold and change of climate weakened my kidneys. My back troubled me and a dull, steady ache across my kidneys wore on me. When I bent over I could hardly straighten because of those pains. My kidneys were weak and I had to get up occasionally at night. I used Doan's Pills and they cured me in fine shape."

MRS. MINNIE SCHAFER, 624 E. Macoupin St., Staunton, Ill., says: "The dull, bearing-down pains in my back made life pretty miserable for me. Colds settled in my kidneys and I'll never forget the headaches. I was nervous and irritable. My kidneys acted irregularly, too. I used Doan's Pills and my back was rid of the pain, my head ceased aching and my kidneys became strong and well."

6,822 DEATHS FROM WHOOPING COUGH

Whooping cough is the most neglected of children's diseases, and one of the most dangerous. There are 6,822 deaths reported in a single year in the United States from this disease. There is no cure for whooping cough, it usually running its course, but relief can be given and its duration shortened. A few drops of Dr. Drake's Glascow will relieve the most violent paroxysms of coughing, and given regularly it will lessen the severity of the attacks and bring quicker recovery. Thousands of people who are sufferers from constipation do not become aware of it until they seek out the cause of their frequent headaches.

"Those bilious headaches can be prevented"

"I know how agonizing they are. For years I was a chronic sufferer."

"And the headaches were not the worst part of it. The strong drugs I used to take to relieve the pain upset my stomach and slowly but surely undermined my general health."

"Finally I found out that my headaches were due to constipation. My doctor advised Nujol. After taking it regularly a few weeks the trouble disappeared."

"Since then I have never had another headache. There is no reason why I should, for the cause has been corrected."

OAK LAWN

OAK LAWN STANDARD SCHOOL
Wilay Simmons, Principal.

Our school re-opened Monday, January 4th after being closed for the holidays. We all appreciate the rest afforded by our short holiday vacation and feel sure that we shall be able to do much better work after it is over.

Our 7th grade class has a new member, viz: Florence Griede, who joined our ranks shortly before Christmas. Florence has also joined our achievement club and the sewing class and is taking a prominent part in all our school activities. The Griede family has just recently moved into the home recently vacated by Mr. Benck who is now living in Oak Lawn. Paul Benck, who is still attending our school and goes back and forth with Mr. and Mrs. Simmons.

Wednesday evening, Dec. 23rd was a pleasant one to all who attended our Christmas program and tree at our school building. The stage was beautifully decorated in the Christmas colors, and represented the interior of a room with the Christmas tree standing beside a quaint old fire place, beautifully lighted, and an old fashioned tea-kettle steaming over the flames. From the mantel hung a number of stockings of various sizes anxiously awaiting Santa Claus. The tree was beautiful with a large bright star beaming from the top. It was a beautiful scene as we watched the pupils point to the big star and hear the bells ring as they sang their Christmas carols. Excellent numbers were given by the little folks, under the direction of Mrs. Simmons, a drill by the larger girls, a musical number by our harmonica band and also one by our song-o-phone band. Santa Claus did not forget us and each kiddie took home an armful of goodies and a toy or useful present.

We give many thanks to our school board who paid for all our treats and presents for the kiddies.

On Thursday afternoon, our pupils gathered with Mr. Simmons, in front of the school and, after a few minutes, took a free buss ride to the big Christmas tree in front of the Oak Lawn Chamber of Commerce headquarters, where they joined with the Oak Lawn children in singing Christmas carols. But that was not all. They were soon in line and receiving their presents as they passed old Santa's stand. Thanks to the Oak Lawn Chamber of Commerce for its spirit of Christmas.

OAK LAWN VILLAGE SCHOOL

The Christmas Holidays are over and teachers and pupils have resumed their work. We are glad to be back, as school hours prove interesting and helpful.

Miss Genevieve Campbell, teacher of the primary room, was married Dec. 26, 1925, to Mr. Peter Kneten. Our best wishes go to this happy couple.

Friday Jan. 8th at 3 o'clock is P. T. A. meeting. All members are urged to be present. Some necessary things are to be discussed. A committee is arranging for an interesting program.

We are proud of an open shelf in our library. This was made possible thru the courtesy and kindness of Messers Jacklich and Salihar. We are greatly indebted to these gentlemen for this.

John Meller from Chicago and Tavern Ehrat are new pupils enrolled in the second grade.

A boys and girls Glee Club will be organized next week.

The following is the school's weekly program: Monday-Teachers meeting; Tuesday-Library night; Wednesday- Boys Glee Club; Thursday-Girls Glee Club and Friday- Assembly and Radio program..
